GRAMMAR

Laid out below are the grammar rules set in stone.

- (1) Adjectives occur after the central noun(not a req. in arts), with SVO universal.
- (2) Teo is the default verb and thus deos not need specification, except for when a quantity has been specified (default verb then is japa).
- (3) Between multiple distinguishable objects, use of jeh and si is required between each object.
- (4) T= are useful articles to use for the cause of disambigulating nouns, but are optional.
- (5) When compounding words, ending vowels where the last vowel is the same as the second to last can be removed. This can also extend to a degree to all unstressed vowels at the end of words.
- (6) There is no hard defined maximum syllable structure, but a good reference is CCVCC.
- (7) If a pronoun is used around the verb 'kata', subject position will mean that the noun is called the object, and in object position means the subject and object spoke to each other.

- (8) Places where words can conjugate their vowels can often merge with the first vowel of the second word, especially when no spoken consonants are between.
- (9) Words can compound, and this can be done to indicate that it is one unit of idea. May sometimes become unique word
